Early Help for your family

Getting the right help and support for your family at the right time

A Guide for Families
There are times when children, young people and families need extra help.

Someone might offer this to you, but other times you might want to ask for it.
What is early help?

Early help is a way of getting extra help and support when your family needs it, but getting it as soon as difficulties start, rather than waiting until things get worse.

It’s for children and young people of any age and their family. Help can come from all kinds of services and organisations who work together to support your family. You might be using some of these services already, but we want to make sure they are providing the right support for you and your family’s needs.

Why would I seek early help?

It could be that you’re worried about your child’s health, development or behaviour, or perhaps because you are caring for a disabled child. Maybe your child is affected by family relationships, drugs or alcohol or you are experiencing personal distress or anxiety, financial or housing problems.

By getting help from the right services at the right time, and as early in a child’s life as possible, we can help prevent or reduce potential problems for children as they grow up.
Who do I ask?

Have a chat with a teacher, health professional or support worker – they can help you look at what types of support are available and who might be able to help. This person will steer you through the help and support you may need.

Your local Family Hub also has lots of services and support for families with children, some especially for children with extra needs.

How do we work with you?

We work together with you whenever you need our support, and we don’t judge.

There is a huge range of services around Doncaster but it’s not always obvious which ones are available to you or how to find them.

While every family is different, the way we work is really straightforward. When you need some support for yourself or your child, we work with you to help you make an Early Help enquiry.

“...you’re on the path to getting support with any problem you might be facing.”

This enquiry will allocate you a lead practitioner who is likely to be someone you already know. They will work with you to do an assessment of your family’s needs. This is known as an Early Help Assessment which helps us speed up your access to almost any service.

When you start the Early Help process, you’re on the path to getting support with any problem you might be facing. Early Help is available at any point in a child’s life, from pregnancy through to adolescence (and up to age 24 for Special Educational Needs and Disabilities).
It depends on what you need and might include services you already get. We will agree it with you and make sure it all joins up. Here are just a few examples:

Education and learning
- Schools (teaching and pastoral/education support)
- Nurseries and childcare
- Early learning groups, such as Growing Friends, Sing and Shake, Jumping Tots, Let’s Tell a Story

Family and young people support

- Young carers service, or support for carers of any age
- Adult mental health support services

The stages of Early Help support

Stage 1
Enquiry and assessment of needs

All services in Doncaster are part of Early Help – for example schools, GPs, housing, health visitors or mental health workers.

A professional from any service that works with you or your child (perhaps a teacher, nurse or health visitor), will gather some details about your family. This professional might not be the right person to provide all the right help for you, so they will share your details through an enquiry to the Early Help team.

This team will find the right person to help you. That person will become your Lead Practitioner.

As a parent or carer, you will need to sign a consent form so that your details can be shared with the Early Help team and other services you may already know, or any service that could help you. There are more details about consent on the form at back of this document.

What happens if I ask for an early help assessment?

You will be fully involved and we will listen to you. It may be that we just talk to you and point you to the support you want.

If it’s a bit more complicated, we’ll need to ask you for information that we write down or type. This is so we can get the right information and share it (if you agree) with people who need to know, so we can better understand your circumstances and match up services that would help you out the most. You’ll get a plan showing what you want to achieve and the support you need.
Your Lead Practitioner will ask you about your needs and together with you start to make a plan for you and your family.

This plan will include access to the services that can give you the best help, for example a midwife; a teacher, job centre, housing officer or a family support worker. Your Lead Practitioner will work alongside you and is your main contact while you need early help support.

Your Lead Practitioner will be the person who will arrange appointments with you, your family and the other services that can help in the best way.

Your children will also be encouraged to discuss their needs and to be at some of the meetings and appointments to ensure the right help is being provided for them, and to ensure their views and wishes are being considered.

Can I say no to an Early Help assessment?

Yes you can. But we would like to stay in contact with you in case your circumstances alter or you change your mind.
What happens when I stop receiving Early Help with a Lead Practitioner?

We want you to become confident and able to find your own solutions for your family. You can continue to use all services that have open access to families and children, but if your needs change then you can ask for further help if you need it at any time.
